"Have got" and "has got" are very common ways to talk about things we own or something someone else has. For example, if you want to say you have a bike, you can say "I have got a bike" or simply "I've got a bike". You hear this a lot in everyday English, especially in British English. It's important to remember that we use "have got" with I, you, we, they, and "has got" with he, she, it. It's easier than it seems! In this activity you can work with exercises of positive, negative and interrogative sentences using have got and has got. Has Got and Have Got Grammar Worksheets Circle the Correct Answers pdf Have got has got exercises worksheets pdf, here you will be able to work on positive sentences using have got and has got, where the student must identify and circle the correct answer. In this worksheet, students can recognize what objects each person has and be able to work with has got or hasn't got, depending on the sentence. On the other hand, you can also use "have got" and "has got" to talk about characteristics or relationships, like "I've got brown eyes" or "She's got two brothers". It's not complicated, but we often forget the contraction (I've got or She's got) which makes it sound more natural. Once you learn these small differences, it will be much easier to talk about what you or someone else has.
