The 2025 Japanese Grand Prix is the third round of the F1 season, scheduled from Friday, April 4, to Sunday, April 6, at Suzuka. The event has seen changes in the grid due to Sergio Perez's departure from Red Bull and the addition of six full-season rookies: Oliver Bearman, Jack Doohan, Liam Lawson, Kimi Antonelli, Isack Hadjar, and Gabriel Bortoleto. These newcomers join established drivers like Lewis Hamilton, who makes his Ferrari debut, Carlos Sainz at Williams, Esteban Ocon at Haas, and Nico Hulkenberg moving from Haas to Sauber. The UK will have near-exclusive coverage through Sky Sports F1, while F1TV offers international coverage for a monthly fee in various countries. The 2025 sprint race weekends follow a similar format, with the Chinese Grand Prix on March 21-23, Miami on May 2-4, Belgian Grand Prix on July 25-27, and more. The season comprises 24 grands prix and six sprint races, concluding at Yas Marina in Abu Dhabi on December 8. The F1 calendar includes a record-breaking 24-race schedule and a new summer break after the Belgian Grand Prix on August 4. The 2024 season had seen several changes, including the return of the Chinese Grand Prix and a revised schedule. The 2024 Formula 1 season is set to be an exciting one, with a total of 24 races scheduled across the globe. The first race of the season will take place on March 9, 2024, at the Jeddah Corniche Circuit in Saudi Arabia. One of the highlights of the 2024 season is the introduction of sprint races, which will add an extra layer of excitement to the traditional weekend format. Six sprint races have been confirmed for the season, with locations including Shanghai, Miami, Red Bull Ring, Austin, Brazil, and Qatar. For fans who can't attend in person, there are various options to watch F1 live in 2024. The availability of TV channels and live streams depends on your location, but some major global markets have secured broadcasting deals with reputable networks such as Sky Sports in the UK, ESPN in the US, and DAZN in Spain. The 2024 season will feature a record-breaking number of races, including six sprint races, which promises to be an unpredictable and thrilling ride for fans. With the introduction of new circuits and racing formats, it's going to be a season to remember.
