and inclusive governance.

The political atmosphere in Lagos is getting more competitive as the local government election is fast approaching. In this report, GBENGA OLONINIRAN details the internal divisions within different political parties fielding candidates for the poll.Campaigns have commenced towards the July 12, 2025, local government elections in Lagos State, according to the timetable released by the Lagos State Independent Electoral Commission, but some political parties still battle internal divisions.Notable among the embattled parties is the ruling All Progressives Congress and the Labour Party.The state chapter of the APC has been embroiled in crisis as aggrieved members continue to protest the primaries conducted by the party on May 10, 2025, at its Lagos headquarters.Despite the leadership of the party maintaining that it held a successful primary to produce candidates for the 20 local government areas and 37 local council development areas, some members faulted the consensus process adopted by the party to pick candidates. Meanwhile, some candidates also emerged through indirect voting.Agege APC members dividedin the Agege and Orile Agege area of Lagos, the APC is divided into two factions over the LG primaries. A faction under the banner of the Presidential Campaign Council has continued to reject the result of the primary that produced chairmanship and councillorship candidates for the area.Another APC group led by the Speaker of the Lagos State House of Assembly, Mudashiru Obasa, says it is in support of the result of the primary.The PCC convened for the third time to fire at Obasa, claiming that the Speakers influence in Agege was imposing. According to them, the candidates who emerged at the primary for the council elections were Obasas loyalists.The spokesperson for the group, Bamofin Akinyemi, said, The APC is under siege. The recent local government primaries held on Saturday, May 10, 2025, have exposed a crisis of representation, fairness, and internal democracy that cannot be ignored by anyone who genuinely believes in party integrity and inclusive governance.The results being circulated in the aftermath of the so-called primaries are nothing short of fiction. They do not reflect the votes, the voices, or the volition of APC members in Agege and Orile-Agege. Instead, they mirror a deeper rot, the continued stranglehold of a political monopoly built over the past 16 years and personified by one man: the Speaker of the Lagos State House of Assembly, Mudashiru Obasa.Obasas dominance of local political structures has reached a critical tipping point. Under his watch, the APC in Agege has ceased to function as a participatory platform. It now operates as a private fiefdom, where ward executives and local government officers, loyal to him by design or coercion, act as a rubber stamp to ratify predetermined outcomes.According to him, There are two political blocs in Agege APC today: the Obasa Movement and the APC membership.The former is obsessed with control; the latter is demanding fairness, Akinyemi said while addressing a press conference in Lagos on Monday.Earlier in May, while speaking during a stakeholders meeting and formal presentation of candidates at the Central Primary School in Agege on May 18, Obasa appealed to members to prioritise the partys unity over personal grievances.Obasa acknowledged that while every party member had the right to express dissatisfaction, such discontent should not be used to destabilise the party.You know that everyone deserves to be elected into all the elective positions that are backed by the constitution and in the council. The positions that were vied for were not family positions, and if after the election, some people came out to vent their anger concerning the primary election, they have the right, but not to use the anger to destroy the house (APC), he said.We know everybody cannot be a leader, and they did not choose themselves we chose them. If we are all leaders, who will be the followers? So we must learn to exercise patience and have confidence in our party. When the party has taken a decision, we must as party members abide by the decision, Obasa said.He further urged members to reach out to those who felt sidelined in the primary process.We must not fight them; we must look for ways to bring them back. If we have to appeal, let us start now by appealing to them. We were friends yesterday and there is the belief that we can be friends tomorrow, he added.Obasa reminded members that the upcoming local government poll was just a stepping stone towards the 2027 general elections.He dismissed claims of imposition of candidates, saying, How can anyone impose candidates on this kind of crowd? He described the Agege primary as peaceful, free, and fair.Also speaking at the event, the Chairman of Agege Local Government, Ganiyu Egunjobi, expressed satisfaction with the conclusion of the primaries, describing the candidates that emerged as a reflection of the peoples will.Women group kicksHundreds of APC female members had stormed the State House in Marina with petitions appealing to Lagos Governor Babajide Sanwo-Olu to help them reach out to President Bola Tinubu over the LG primaries.At the top of their demands was an agitation for the cancellation of the APC LG primary for gbdo/Oke-Odo Council.In the petition jointly signed by the LGA Vice Chairperson, Funmilayo Odelabi, and the LGA Woman Leader, Mary Ishola, addressed to Tinubu, they sought the intervention of Tinubu to review the alleged ongoing attempt to impose candidates in the council for the LG elections.We, the women of the APC, reject the outcome of the election in its totality as it does not conform to the standards of democracy and openness you have set for our party over the years and is far from the reality on the ground in Agbado/Oke-Odo LCDA.We appeal to you to compel the Primary Elections Committee to announce the true result of the election or the conduct of a fresh election in the full glare of all relevant stakeholders.The PUNCH reports that the Appeal Committee set up by the APC in Lagos treated over 100 petitions in respect of the outcome of the primaries. It has yet to disclose its report.Among other areas where aggrieved members are protesting the APC LG primaries are the Lagos Mainland Local Government Area and Yaba Local Council Development Area. When contacted, the APC spokesperson in the state, Chief Seye Oladejo, said the party was resolving the issues.He said, Theyre talking to them locally and at the state level. Were trying to resolve whatever disagreement and see how we can bring peace and how we can continue to work together.The primary was bound to attract such conflict based on interests. Its just normal, people took it just as if it were the real elections. Thats why were having that kind of situation. Its something we have always managed, and this will not be different.LP ready for polls LeadersA chieftain of the Labour Party in Lagos, Sam Okpala, has claimed that there is no division within the party.This is despite the fact that in mid-May, the Lagos State Independent Electoral Commission said it wrote to the Independent National Electoral Commission for guidance over the emergence of three factions within the LP ahead of the July 12 LG poll.Speaking during a stakeholders forum held in Ikeja, the LASIEC Chairman, Justice Bola Okikiolu-Ighile (ret'd.), revealed that the commission received invitations from three separate LP groups to monitor their primaries, prompting the agency to seek clarification from INEC.On our records, we have three factions (of the Labour Party) with different sets of names, and because of that, we had to forward a letter to INEC for advice, and we are awaiting a response on that.Without that, we cannot participate in any primary. And this, we had intimated to each faction.A Secretary of an LP Caretaker Committee in the state, Dorcas Omorodion, said the committee was making efforts to unite all party members.It is general knowledge that there are internal issues in our party. And for the sake of the election that is fast coming, we intend to bring all warring factions together. There are plans by the state committee chairman, Rotimi Oduanaiké, to visit all local governments and try and bring all warring factions together so that we can have a larger front towards the elections. Omorodion said in a telephone interview.The committee had claimed earlier in May that it had suspended Pastor Dayo Ekong, and Sam Okpala as chairman and secretary of the party, respectively, over alleged gross misconduct and breach of the partys constitution.Meanwhile, Okpala spoke to our correspondent on Tuesday and dismissed what was happening in the party as handiwork of some fifth columnists.He said LASIEC and INEC had affirmed him and other executives as the authentic leaders of the LP in Lagos.The PUNCH cannot immediately verify the claim as the spokesperson for LASIEC, Tope Ojo, has not responded to inquiries when called in the phone several times.Okpala said, We dont want to be distracted. The Labour Party is intact. The focus of the Labour Party as we speak now is towards winning majority seats and chairmanship positions in the forthcoming local government election in Lagos State. As far as we are concerned, the Labour Party is not factionalised.As far as Nigerian law is concerned, INEC is the regulatory body that oversees political parties. And it is within their purview to know who is what in any political party. And INEC responded positively to the inquiry.LASIEC, in fairness to them, of course, should be confused as a body. They are neutral umpires, and they did what they were supposed to do by getting in touch with the regulatory agencies for political parties, which is the INEC. And INEC clarified to them the leadership of the party in Lagos State. The Labour Party in Lagos State is led by Pastor Mrs. Dayo Ekong as the chairman and my humble self as the state secretary, and with the other 22 members of the states working community. There is no controversy over that.And it was based on this clarification that we were issued with LASIEC forms for our candidates to come in, and as we speak today, LASIEC has placed the names of our prospective candidates for the election on their notice board. So what are we talking about here? We are working!PDP, others brace upAccording to the LASIEC boss, 19 registered political parties would be participating in the upcoming elections.We have 19 registered parties (participating in the LG elections), she said.LASIEC also confirmed that it observed the Peoples Democratic Party and Social Democratic Party primaries.The Deputy Chairman of the PDP in Lagos, Tai Benedict, said the party was also having minimal division, but it is manageable.In every political party in Nigeria now, there is division, only that the PDP division is very minimal since the exit of Jandor (Abdul-Azeez Adediran).We have very minimal problems, but its not as if there are none. But we can manage. Our campaign for the LG elections is ongoing. Were going to manage our resources and try as much as possible to showcase to Lagos residents that were still in existence.We might be lucky with some local governments, Benedict said in an interview.The Lagos State chapter of the African Action Congress on Saturday also launched a campaign committee for its councillorship candidate in Alimosho, Oworonshoki and her allies of Lagos.We are excited to announce the launch of our campaign committee for our partys candidates in Alimosho, the partys campaign chairman in the area, Samuel Jimoh, said in a statement seen by The PUNCH.The AAC chairman in Lagos, Ayovinka Oni, said the party was the only true pro-people party in Lagos.The AAC is bringing the peoples alternative to the ballots, unlike the other parties that have made Lagos a city for the rich alone. From Oworonshoki to Alimosho, to other areas, our candidates are campaigning at the grassroots level for the LG poll. Oni said in chat. More An explosion sound was heard on Monday near the Abacha Barracks located along the Nyanja-Maraba road in Abuja, causing panic among residents and passersby.Sources told The PUNCH that one person sustained injuries in the aftermath of the explosion. There was an explosion around our area today. I cant categorically say, it was a case of suicide bombing has been peddled. But what is sure is that there was an explosion. One of the sources said.Efforts to reach the Nigerian Army spokesperson, Lt. Col. Onyechi Anele, for comments were unsuccessful. When contacted, the spokesperson for the Federal Capital Territory Police Command, Josephine Adeb, confirmed an explosion that occurred on along the Mararaba-Nyanja bypass in Abuja. According to a statement by Adeb, the incident happened at about 2:50 PM and prompted an immediate response from the Explosive Ordnance Disposal Unit, which was deployed to the scene.She said the area was quickly cordoned off for clearance and analysis to ensure the safety of commuters and residents.One male victim was rescued at the scene and promptly taken to the hospital, where he is currently receiving medical attention, Adeb said.She added that a comprehensive investigation, including forensic analysis, has commenced to determine the exact cause and nature of the explosion.The police have urged residents to remain calm and vigilant, assuring the public that there is no cause for alarm. They also encouraged the public to report any suspicious activity to the nearest police station or via the following emergency numbers: 0803200313, 08028940883, and 07057337653. Governor Babajide Sanwo-olu signs 2025 budget Lagos State Governor, Babajide Sanwo-Olu, on Thursday, signed the 3.366 trillion 2025 appropriation bill into law.Sanwo-Olu gave his assent to the budget tagged Budget of Sustainability at Lagos House, Alausa, Ikeja.After signing the budget, the governor stated that the budget aims to address infrastructure, economic diversification, and other critical sectors in the state. He said, The Lagos State government will also live up to the responsibility of delivering governance that is respectful of and responsive to the people at all times. The governor charged the civil service and all other concerned stakeholders to deliver an impressive level of budget implementation in 2025.Sanwo-Olu commended the Speaker of the Lagos State Assembly, Mudashiru Obasa and the entire leadership of the House for the prompt passage of the budget.The Lagos State Commissioner for Economic Planning and Budget, Ope George, said the historic budget underscores the state governments commitment to prioritizing infrastructure, with 62% allocated to capital expenditure and 38% to recurrent spending. According to him, the allocation represents the governments focus on driving long-term investments while maintaining efficient delivery of essential services.He said, Our revenue framework, which projects 2.342 trillion from total internally generated revenue and 626.137 billion from federal transfers, is anchored on innovation, accountability, and fiscal sustainability. A deficit financing of N398.662 billion has also been carefully structured to ensure financial prudence.The Chairman of the House Committee on Appropriation, Saad Olumo, said the 2025 budget looks into the development of the state, including electricity, road infrastructure, and education development, among others that will address the needs of Lagos residents.Sanwo-Olu had on November 21 presented a budget estimate of N3,005,935,193,401 to the state House of Assembly, which has now been signed into law barely a month after the 2025 budget presentation.However, the State Assembly passed the 2025 appropriation bill on Monday, totalling N3,366,815,224,144. This approval came after the Joint Committee on Appropriation and Finance Chairman presented a budget report.The lawmakers approved the budget via a voice vote at a sitting presided over by the Speaker. As of the time of filing this report, 10 had been rescued, while three others remain unaccounted for.In an update to PUNCH Metro, the Lagos State Emergency Management Agency confirmed that one of the four initially unaccounted-for occupants had been recovered dead from the rubble.While the cause of the collapse remains unclear, the Lagos State Fire and Rescue Service confirmed that 14 people were inside the building before it collapsed. In a statement released on Tuesday, the Director of the Lagos State Fire and Rescue Service, Margaret Adeseye, through the agencys spokesperson, Amodu Shakiru, disclosed that rescue efforts were ongoing.The statement read, Its a rescue involving the collapse of an uncompleted two-storey building located at the back of a bungalow, consisting of two rooms and a parlour, all built on a land space of about 648 square metres. It added, A total number of 14 people were in the building. Ten adult males, aged between 28 and 35, were rescued and taken to an undisclosed hospital for treatment. As of this report, rescue and search operations are still ongoing for the remaining persons.The statement also listed the agencies involved in the rescue mission. These include a team of the Lagos Neighbourhood Safety Corps, Ikorodu Command, led by SNGCO Ogidiolu Dare; Lagos State Building Control Agency, Ikorodu Central; Lagos State Emergency Management Agency, from Alausa, led by Soriki; Nigerian Security and Civil Defence Corps, Ikorodu Division, led by ASC I Abimbola Aderibigbe; Nigeria Police Force, Ikorodu Divisional Headquarters, led by DPO Akiola Clement and the Federal Road Safety Corps, Ikorodu Unit Command, led by ARC A. Adetona.Earlier, PUNCH Metro reported that a Facebook user, Rasheed Fatuga, posted about the incident, stating that the building was located directly opposite the Mobil Filling Station (formerly Bugon Filling Station) in the Ota-Ona area.This latest incident comes just a month after a similar tragedy in April, when a three-storey building collapsed in the Ojodu Berger area of Lagos, claiming five lives.The structure, which housed a popular restaurant, was reportedly undergoing construction at the time it came crashing down in the early hours of the morning, trapping several occupants and passersby. Dele Momodu and Nyesom Wike Peoples Democratic Party chieftain, Dele Momodu, has applauded President Bola Tinubu for halting the sealing of properties in Abuja over unpaid ground rent, a move he described as proof that Tinubu is firmly in control of his administration.The Federal Capital Territory Authority, under the supervision of FCT Minister Nyesom Wike, had on Monday, May 26, sealed several business premises in Abuja, including banks, filling stations, the Federal Inland Revenue Service office, and notably, the national secretariat of the PDP. The action was reportedly due to unpaid ground rents amounting to billions of Naira.However, following widespread public backlash and criticism from affected property owners, President Tinubu ordered a temporary suspension of the enforcement. He also gave all defaulters a 14-day grace period to settle their debts.Reacting via Instagram, Momodu praised Tinubu for stepping in and described the decision as a significant check on what he called Wikes excesses. THANK YOU, PRESIDENT TINUBU, Your Excellency, good evening, sir. I have just read the news here in America that you have stepped into the matter of your cantankerous Minister of FCT, MR NYESOM WIKE who sealed the National Secretariat of the PDP, the biggest rival of your ruling party, APC, and properties of other defaulters in Abuja earlier today.While no one should condone non-compliance of government obligations, government must always restrain itself from vindictive outbursts such as that of Nigerias most querulous politician who Im sure is fast becoming a liability to your government. The decision to stop Wike today achieved several points in your favour. Momodu criticised Wikes approach as vindictive and disruptive, accusing the FCT Minister of wielding power as though he were not answerable to anyone.The PDP stalwart also used the opportunity to call on President Tinubu to rein in Wikes political activities in Rivers State, where Wike has been locked in a prolonged power struggle with Governor Sim Fubara.He added, We used to think we have two presidents in Nigeria, TINUBU and WIKE. Now, we know WIKE has a boss who can checkmate his excesses. How I wished you had stopped his reckless disruption and distraction of the SIM FUBARA government in Rivers State and saved the hapless people from this unfortunate contraption called emergency rule.Nigerians are currently going through so much hardship and pain, and you need to rescue them from WIKEs additional burden and insults. WIKEs assignments are far smaller than that of Minister DAVE UMAHI, yet the man is so humble while WIKE subjects Nigerians to his tautological press conferences as if hes running his own Federal government and not under anyones control.Sir, there cant be two captains in one ship, and I hope WIKE got that message loud and clear from your powerful intervention today.
