

I'm not a robot

Umbrella academy abigail

Sy Grossman[1]Gene Thibedeau[1] December 2024[2] (reset universe) The City, United States, Earth[2] "The White Violin"(February 15, 2019) Abigail Hargreeves was an alien scientist whose creations resulted in the Cleanse infection, which wiped out most of her race and nearly killed her. Her husband, Sir Reginald Hargreeves, made it his mission to bring her back to life, and kept her alive her in stasis on the moon orbitng Earth, while he worked on the planet itself for many years. Eventually, after heavy alterations to the timeline made by Reginald's adoptive superhero children, the Umbrella Academy, an alternate Reginald managed to reset the universe via the Hotel Oblivion and restore Abigail. However, she resented him for not allowing her to die for her sins, and sought to bring about the Cleanse again to destroy Earth. Biography[1] Personality[1] Powers[1] Unknown Alien Physiology: To be added Shapeshifting: By wearing the whole skins of humans, she can essentially become them utilising the owners original voice, mass and height. The skin can still be removed as shown when she revealed her female face to Reginald after taking Gene's skin. Appearances[1] References[1] Spoilers ahead.At the end of the third season of The Umbrella Academy, viewers were gobsmacked when Abigail Hargreeves (Lisa Repo-Martell), wife of Sir Reginald Hargreeves (Colm Feore), had been resurrected from the dead. In past seasons, it was revealed that she had died long before Sir Reginald came to Earth (yes, they're both aliens), and that her body was being cryogenically frozen on the moon. Reginald sent Luther Hargreeves (Tom Hopper) to the moon to protect her, unbeknownst to Luther, as he thought he was just on the moon for some science experiments. With all these references to Abigail, it seemed clear she had a bigger role in the puzzle. After fans speculated and speculated, her part in the grand unraveling of the universe is finally revealed in the fourth and final season.Abigail created the substance, called marigold, that caused the Hargreeves’ biological mothers to give birth after Reginald brought it to the Earth from their home planet. It’s also responsible for the kids’ superpowers. When she made this, she also inadvertently created another potion, durango. When combined, marigold and durango will bring about the Cleanse, which zaps away any additional timelines and returns the world to its correct, original order. Thus, anyone who is not in the “correct” timeline will not only die but cease to exist. NetflixIn this season’s timeline, and the one the Hargreeves are trapped in, Abigail finds it to be her mission to help bring about the Cleanse. She knows this timeline where she’s alive is not supposed to exist. She is supposed to be dead, and she is resentful to Reginald for bringing her back to life here. Thus, she poses as Sy Grossman (David Cross), saying she “lost her daughter,” Jennifer (Victoria Sawal), and encourages the Hargreeves siblings to go to New Grumpson, Maine, to save her. There’s durango in Jennifer’s system, so if she comes into contact with any of the Hargreeves siblings, the Cleanse will occur. Later, after Jennifer is kidnapped by Jean (Megan Mullally) and Gene Thibedeau (Nick Offerman), she poses as Sy again and convinces Ben Hargreeves (Justin H. Min) to chase after her, making sure that durango and marigold come together. The Hargreeves children first meet Abigail in her actual form (not as Sy Grossman) at her and Reginald’s mansion after they were almost killed by Reginald’s militia in New Grumpson, Maine. The militia was protecting Jennifer, and Reginald had set up the village to make sure the marigold and durango never came into contact. The siblings think they’re walking into a fight and dismantled the whole town, however Abigail welcomes them into her home with open arms and plays the violin that was given to Viktor after she originally died. She knows all of the children and their old timelines, who have now settled into this timeline comfortably. She’s also softened Reginald, and convinces him to help them remember Ben’s death, which is key to understanding the world and what’s going on.Courtesy of NetflixAfter she develops relationships with the children and encourages them chase after Ben and Jennifer, she finds Jean and Gene. There, Abigail kills Gene and takes over his skin, hoping to work from inside their cult of followers to bring about the Cleanse even faster. Jean and Gene (who is now actually Abigail), succeed at bringing Ben and Jennifer together, and thus, no matter the efforts of the Hargreeves children, the Cleanse ensues. Abigail, still dressed as Gene, walks over to Reginald and sits by him as the Cleanse monster, a scary, beast-like creature, eats the whole world. Reginald asks Gene/Abigail if they know what they’ve done, and Abigail finally reveals herself, zipping off Gene’s skin and grabbing Reginald’s hand, proud that she ended the world. Abigail says she had no other choice. When she originally created the marigold and durango, she believed dying was her penance for creating something so deadly, knowing it would not only bring the end of the world, but also the end of a variety of timelines. She asks Reginald why he brought the marigold here from their planet after seeing their own world destroyed, as Reginald knew the marigold could destroy the earth, too. He doesn’t have a great answer, and then she asks Reginald why he brought her back to life in this timeline. Reginald says it was an act of love, but Abigail replies, “It was hubris.” His actions had consequences—which led to all of the incorrect timelines being created—and she decided she had to set everything right. Bringing about the Cleanse was the only solution. Abigail and Reginald are then taken by the monster, giving into the Cleanse. Abigail is the reason the Cleanse happened, and without her work, the Hargreeves children couldn’t have brought the world back to its original timeline. Thus, Abigail both ended and saved the world.What We Know About 'The Umbrella Academy' S4 Sy Grossman[1]Gene Thibedeau[1] December 2024[2] (reset universe) The City, United States, Earth[2] "The White Violin"(February 15, 2019) Abigail Hargreeves was an alien scientist whose creations resulted in the Cleanse infection, which wiped out most of her race and nearly killed her. Her husband, Sir Reginald Hargreeves, made it his mission to bring her back to life, and kept her alive her in stasis on the moon orbiting Earth, while he worked on the planet itself for many years. Eventually, after heavy alterations to the timeline made by Reginald's adoptive superhero children, the Umbrella Academy, an alternate Reginald managed to reset the universe via the Hotel Oblivion and restore Abigail. However, she resented him for not allowing her to die for her sins, and sought to bring about the Cleanse again to destroy Earth. Biography[1] Personality[1] Powers[1] Unknown Alien Physiology: To be added Shapeshifting: By wearing the whole skins of humans, she can essentially become them utilising the owners original voice, mass and height. The skin can still be removed as shown when she revealed her female face to Reginald after taking Gene's skin. Appearances[1] References[1] Sy Grossman[1] Gene Thibedeau[1] December 2024[2] (reset universe) The City, United States, Earth[2] "The White Violin"(February 15, 2019) Abigail Hargreeves was an alien scientist whose creations resulted in the Cleanse infection, which wiped out most of her race and nearly killed her. Her husband, Sir Reginald Hargreeves, made it his mission to bring her back to life, and kept her alive her in stasis on the moon orbiting Earth, while he worked on the planet itself for many years. Eventually, after heavy alterations to the timeline made by Reginald's adoptive superhero children, the Umbrella Academy, an alternate Reginald managed to reset the universe via the Hotel Oblivion and restore Abigail. However, she resented him for not allowing her to die for her sins, and sought to bring about the Cleanse again to destroy Earth. Biography[1] Personality[1] Powers[1] Unknown Alien Physiology: To be added Shapeshifting: By wearing the whole skins of humans, she can essentially become them utilising the owners original voice, mass and height. The skin can still be removed as shown when she revealed her female face to Reginald after taking Gene's skin. Appearances[1] References[1] Warning: This post contains spoilers for The Umbrella Academy season 3 Abigail Hargreeves is no stranger to The Umbrella Academy, but she remains an enigma even as season 3 resurrects her from the dead. In the season 3 finale, Reginald was close to fulfilling what was seemingly a lifelong dream — using the Umbrella Academy as the key and energy source to power a machine that would reset the universe. While he was killed by Allison in a last-minute bid to save her siblings, the damage was already done, and the final moments revealed the long-dead Abigail had returned. The Umbrella Academy season 3 revealed that Luther’s years on the moon, on what he eventually came to believe was a dead-end mission for Reginald, were important. In a flashback sequence of Luther’s time on the moon, he comes across a force field that won’t allow him to go any further to investigate. On the other side of the force field was Abigail Hargreeves, frozen inside a chamber, with Luther unknowingly tasked to protect her. When factoring in Abigail’s return to the series, Reginald Hargreeve’s actions start to make a lot more sense. The reason he adopted the Umbrella Academy, why he trained them to properly use their powers, and the ultimate plan to restore the universe and bring back Abigail with it. But who exactly is Abigail and how did she die? While Abigail Hargreeves may seem like a new character in The Umbrella Academy season 3, she was actually introduced all the way back in the season 1 finale. Her introductory scene was, much like her, a rather mysterious one, but it seemed obvious that she and Reginald were married and cared for each other quite deeply. However, Abigail was on her deathbed, handing over her violin to Reginald with a promise that he would pass it on to someone else (it was eventually given to Viktor Hargreeves). Considering the nature of Abigail and Reginald’s relationship, and that she died during what was perhaps the end of their world, Abigail was likely an alien as well. The cause of Abigail’s death is unclear, but she passed away years prior to Reginald Hargreeves’ arrival on Earth in the early 20th century, likely after their own planet had been completely destroyed. Back then, Abigail was under the impression that Reginald was a key figure in the universe and that it needed him for something greater. It’s possible that resetting the world was what Abigail was referring to all those years ago. Now that Abigail is back, it could be that her presence greatly alters the way Reginald goes about things. He wasn’t a very good father, so focused on his mission and training the Umbrella Academy (and the Sparrow Academy in season 3) that he neglected them as people. The Umbrella Academy season 4 could see him be more genuine in his treatment of them, especially because they’ll probably seek him out for answers. Conversely, it’s possible Abigail is just as mission-driven and cruel as her husband. It could go either way since audiences know very little about her and her intentions. Whatever the case may be, The Umbrella Academy season 3 sets up Abigail to be a crucial figure in season 4, which will hopefully provide more answers about her and Reginald’s history. Next: Who Is The Narrator In Umbrella Academy Season 3?