The National Environmental Management: Waste Amendment Act 26 of 2014 aims to amend and improve the waste management system by making changes to definitions, excluding certain departments from plan compilation, requiring concurrence on industry plans, establishing a pricing strategy, and creating the Waste Management Bureau. This act also outlines the objects, functions, funding, financial management, reporting, auditing, and immovable property of the bureau. Additionally, the National Environmental Management Laws Amendment Act, 25 of 2014 seeks to amend environmental laws by reviewing instruments, defining words, providing minimum information requirements, clarifying provisions, strengthening financial provisions, managing residue stockpiles, empowering directors-general and ministers, and designating inspectors for compliance monitoring. To allow management inspectors to conduct compliance monitoring and enforcement under specific conditions, rather than mineral resource inspectors; empower provincial heads to delegate responsibilities entrusted to them under this Act; provide for suspending decisions pending appeals; permit appeals against directives; further empower the Minister to issue regulations; ensure consultation when Parliament amends an Act or regulation impacting the Agreement; establish criteria for condonation applications in cases related to prospecting, exploration, mining, or production. Additionally, the National Environmental Management: Waste Act of 2008 will be updated by inserting definitions, prohibiting/restricting waste management activities in specific areas, and delegating licensing authority for waste management licenses related to mineral and petroleum resources. The National Environmental Management Amendment Act of 2008 will also be revised to include transitional arrangements, amend commencement provisions, delete obsolete provisions, and address connected matters.
